Gig payout reconciliation

Use a reference you create yourself to match earnings and bank deposits. Count a payout once. Complete all four weeks, including any zero-income week. This is not a tax calculation or a statement of accepted lending documents.

1. Match the records

Week / date	Your reference	Gross ($)	Fee ($)	Net ($)

A matching bank confirmation is evidence of the payout, not another income entry. Own-account transfers are not new customer earnings. For an already-net payout, do not subtract its withheld fee again.

Unmatched deposits or differences to investigate

Low-week cash-flow check

Separate platform deductions from additional work costs. Choose your own reserve; this worksheet does not calculate tax due. The lowest complete week may be more useful than the best week when planning a commitment.

Week	Net payouts ($)	Work costs ($)	Reserve ($)	Remainder ($)

Weekly essential household spending ($)

Weekly budget allocation for the proposed loan payment ($)

Lowest-week remainder after essentials and proposed allocation ($)

Questions about the actual document requirements or payment dates

The loan may use another payment frequency. Compare its actual due dates with payout posting dates at www.cash-installment.com/eligibility/gig-workers/. A positive remainder is not proof of approval or affordability.
